- Memories -

With-in This Memory Book you'll find
A record of Things we're leaving behind
Our teachers, our work, Our fun
Through The year
That will ever remain in our hearts
most dear.

. . . . .

As we leave Dumbarton, for Things
on ahead,
We'll never forget the True friendships we've made
As we strive for a goal with an earnest heart
We'll not forget old Dumbarton—
Where we got a fine start.

CLASS PROPHECY

'Tis an early morning in June, 1961, and I find myself winging my way across the states toward Virginia in a new Strato-liner, one of the latest designs of the ace airplane designer Carl Saunders. I had just covered a story on the world renowned concert violinist, Eva Snelson, as a reporter for the A. P., and was returning home for a long awaited vacation.

As I was preparing to take a little cat-nap, the air-hostess tapped me on the shoulder to ask whether she could assist me to be comfortable, and to my surprise I at once recognised her as my old school friend, Mary Va. Bagby. In a few minutes it was discovered that the both of us were free from duties for the next week, so we decided to spend the time in Richmond and vicinity for old time's sake.

At once surprises began to come thick and fast. As we stepped off the plane in Richmond, I noticed a familiar easy-going manner about the pilot. Imagine my surprise in finding it to be Dorman Dunville. I learned from the office that Dorman had just won his rating as the No. 1 transport pilot of the country, having completed 16 years of service for the Holloway Airlines Inc., President Taylor Holloway of the corporation had announced the distinction at a banquet held two weeks before in the Myrtle Room of the new 45-story Edward Garnett Hotel.

We visited Richmond for several days during which time one of our most novel experiences being the mortification of an arrest for speeding by Lt. Wesley Waters of the Richmond Police Force. He said we were going 75 miles per hour in a 65 mile zone. He rather apologetically gave us a ticket, but heartened us with the remark that we needn't worry, as we were good friends of the judge. We, anticipating another reunion experience, eagerly asked who the judge was, but Wesley only replied, "Just see him tomorrow morning at 10:00 o'clock."

The next morning we went early, but court was already in session. From an onlooker we were informed that a very entertaining case was up. It seemed that a very fashionable lady had violated some minor traffic regulation for the 57th. time in the last five weeks, and was pleading with the judge and the lawyers of both sides for leniency. The opposing lawyers were having a friendly checker game between the wordy pleas of the defendant, Phyllis McClaugherty, and the calm, deliberate, sober replies of the lady judge, Evelyn Tate, who was the only person in the court who was not amused by the antics of Phyllis. Finally, the attorney for the defendant, Calvin Schwabe, offered to plead on behalf of Phyllis, only to be called back to his checker game by the prosecutor with the remark, "I'll bet a plug nickel, I've got you in a pickle." At once he was recognized as Buddy Hamersly. We had to leave at this point for we were in the wrong court, this being the one for habitual offenders. Our experience in the next room was brief. Here another surprise greeted us as His Honor Judge Bruce Locke, in a very dignified manner, quietly admonished us and made a date with Mary Va. to attend the Curles Neck Races the next Saturday.

We were informed that several of our former classmates were in business in the city so we set out the next morning to look them up. First we came upon Anne Mitchell's Dress Shoppe which at the time was displaying the latest exclusive summer wear designed by Shirley Wiltshire. In the shop we met Kathryn Jones and Doris Whitlow, who had come up from Miami to purchase gowns and wardrobe for a proposed trip to Europe in quest of excitement. Upon questioning I was surprised to find that they were both still single.

When Mary Va. returned from the races with the news that Bagley Shuman, popular horseman and sportsman, had been injured in a fall from his horse at Curles Neck, we at once made our plans to visit him, at the same time knowing that we might see some of our old classmates at the Louis Foss Hospital. The head surgeon, Peyton Wellford assured us that Bagley was doing nicely. We asked a cute little nurse for some information and were directed to the desk where Virginia Brady told us such things that we wished to know, and also that the cute little nurse we had just seen was none other than Marian Dowell, Head Nurse of the institution. She said that Dr. Mary Carr Mahaley was planning to accept a new position in the largest hospital in the United States as chief advisory surgeon. Dr. Charles Tuck appeared with a little round gentelman, and the two were talking about Bagley's condition. When the little round man faced us we recognized him to be Louis Riddell, who was Bagley's partner in the horse business.

That night we attended a meeting at the new Mosque under the auspices of the Richmond Women's Club, of which two of our old classmates were president and secretary. They were Dora Darhanian and Christine Berry, both now happily married to two of Richmond's leading businessmen. The speaker of the evening was Margaret Ford, famous radio actress of the Ford Children's Hour, and the guest singer was the noted soprano, Mrs. Jean Woodward Vanderbilt.

After scanning the movie ads. in the Leroy Moorman's Richmond Daily Bugle, we chose to attend the Quarrells Theatre managed in Richmond by Paul Christoph and James Matthews. On the screen was the picture "Hard TO Get" featuring Edith Stells and Ruby Bright, a comedy short with the newest team Byrl McCarthy and Bobby Atkinson, and a cartoon by Madeline Hill, who started where disney left off.

The next morning we left Richmond for Redford Beach in a taxiplane driven by Warren Thornton. He tuned in the television set to a baseball game. As we were both great fans we watched the game with unusual delight. As a husky left-handed batter strode to the plate we recognized Robert Jones who promptly lifted the next pitch high over the rightfield fence and the Chicago White Sox, owned and managed by Mr. Strite, our former principal, were one game nearer their third straight pennant. After the game the television set showed educational shorts, first the construction work on a new bridge across Lake Erie, engineered by Beverly Wilkes, and next a course on the correct application on "Doris Yager's Freckle Cream."

Illustrated news followed. Among the interesting bits of news was the announcement that Mr. Cameron G. Yagel was just appointed dean of the Union Theological Seminary at Denver, Colorado, that Lucille Houston and Violet Adams had just invented a new and more permanent hair wave, and that Hazel Mitchell and Annie Marie Spencer had just won $75,000 each on the Irish Sweepstakes, which was won by the American horse Bright Lady, owned by Cortenay Rogers.

FLASH----- Virginia Helmes, the great geologist and Katherine Schultz, painter of Marine Life have just returned from the Endless Caverns after having remained underground for 10 years.

The news having been completed, the face of the announcer flashed across the screen and we immediately recognized it as that of John Earl Keller.
